PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

My name is Karen Astell and I am extremely excited to begin my journey into full-stack web development. I've earned a Bachelor of Science in Math Education and a Masters of Education, both from the University of New Hampshire. The decision making and collaborative skills I've acquired over the past 15 years in education will help me tremendously in the world of web development. I am decisive yet adaptable in high-pressure environments and have a real passion for collaborating with others. I have completed a full-stack web development certification program through UNH's Coding Bootcamp. During this course, I developed my skills in HTML, CSS, JavaScript, jQuery, and Node.js as well as focusing on creating responsive web applications. Employers often acknowledge my problem-solving skills and a strong work ethic which lends itself to working in web development teams or individual projects. I am eager to create web applications that are applicable and user friendly. I look forward to beginning my new career in web development.
